

Silent Spring Institute conducted a study testing consumer products for 66 endocrine disruptors and asthma-related chemicals. The methods and results, published in Environmental Health Perspectives, can be found here: <http://dx.doi.org/10.1289/ehp.1104052>. Below is a table of the products tested in this study. This study represents only a small fraction of consumer products and a small number of the chemicals used in products. In addition, since manufacturers are constantly reformulating their products and products may vary in different regions of the U.S, results from these tests may not apply to current products on the shelves. The study combined the conventional products into composite samples for testing, so results for conventional products cannot be linked to a specific product. Alternative products were tested individually.
